

PAPAL LEGATE IS AN ENVOY OF PEACE TO MANILA.

Archbishop Chappelle Goes to the Philippines to Convince People of Their Erroneous Ideas of American Rule.

The Papal Representative Confers with the President and Receives Instructions Which May End the Rebellion.

He Will Call a Conference of the Priesthood of the Islands to Assure Them That the Church Shall Be Secure.

Washington, Oct. 21.—"I am convinced that the President intends to deal fairly by the people of the Philippines and honestly by the Roman Catholic Church. I shall leave for Manila during the latter part of next month, and shall do all I can to bring about peace between this country and the Philippines. I pray God that peace may soon come."

This was the statement made to a journal reporter by Archbishop Chappelle, Papal Legate to the Philippines, this afternoon after an hour's conference with President McKinley. Archbishop Chappelle has long had the confidence of the President. It was he who solved many of the trouble some problems connected with the Church in Porto Rico and Cuba.

The conference this afternoon was one of the most extended yet held. As a result of the interview Archbishop Chappelle will go to Manila with full power to act with the local priests and present the Government side of the question. He will lay before the priests of the Philippines information that will prove to them that loyalty to the United States does not mean the overthrow of the Catholic Church, nor the punishment of Filipinos who have been in rebellion.

The Papal Delegate will do the following things with the sanction of the United States Government: He will call a conference of the priesthood of the islands to be presided over by the Archbishop of Manila and will inform that conference that it is not the intention of the United States Government to seize the church property or prevent the free exercise of the Catholic religion.

He will assure them that under the republican form of government in the United States there is the widest possible latitude of religious liberty. He will explain that the Catholic religion, under the sovereignty of the United States will have as much freedom of action and as much control over its parishes as anywhere in the world, and that so far as the Government is concerned there will be an absolute prohibition of interference in the affairs of the Church.

Archbishop Chappelle will prove to the Filipino priests that opposition to the Government of the United States is unwise in that opposition grows from a fear that the rights of the Church are not to be respected and that the Government of the American republic is opposed to the religion which dominates the islands.

Armed with full authority from this Government to present the case from the standpoint of the Church, the President believes the visit of the Archbishop will be fruitful of good results and that soon after he arrives there will be a change in the sentiments of the priests of the islands.

The Archbishop, accompanied by the best wishes of the President and the blessings of the Pope, is expected to remove all the opposition to the revolutionists and to impress upon the people of the Philippines the fact that loyalty to the United States is not incompatible with the Catholic Church, which is so highly respected in the United States.

Further Chappelle himself says he expects to show the people that they have been mistaken in their conception of the people of this country and their ideas of our form of government. He expects that the reaction is largely due to the mistaken notions of the natives that an assault on their religion is intended.

While in Manila he will also take an inventory of the Church property. He is convinced that that which rightfully belongs to the Church will be returned to it. The churches, the monasteries and the land adjacent thereto necessary to support these institutions will, he believes, be granted to the Church. Whether the specially large holdings that have been held by the Church will be retained is a question which he cannot say. He expects the amount of these holdings Father Chappelle will report upon his return.

WILL SHOW WORK OF SOUTHERN WOMEN

Mrs. Pryor Plans a Means of Exploiting Unknown Industries.

ARTS THEY EXCEL IN.

Weaving and Drawn Work, Dainty Table Relishes and Cooking.

What Lady Aberdeen has done for the women of Ireland, Mrs. Roger A. Pryor proposes doing for the women of the South, bettering their condition by making their various industries known.

Realizing that there would be a large market for their handwork in the North if it were better known, she has arranged for a woman's department in the Southern Exposition, which will be held in this city early next Spring. In it every kind of labor done by Southern women will be exhibited.

"If a woman send me a sheet of wheat that she has raised it will be shown," said Mrs. Pryor. "Nothing will be too small."

Representative women in the Southern colonies here have promised their aid and pledged themselves to work for the success of the exhibition. We only organized last Wednesday, and have not yet decided in just which one of the big halls the exhibition will be held, but already all through the South the needles are threaded and women are busy preparing their exhibits.

"It is not generally known," said Mrs. Pryor, "that some of the finest shawls made in the world are made in the South. Some of the finest shawls made in the world are made in the South. Some of the finest shawls made in the world are made in the South."

"In the mountains of Georgia, where the women are very poor, they make a kind of homespun which is truly beautiful. None of the finest drawn work from Mexico can surpass that done by the women of Richmond, who are also wonderful artists in colored silk embroidery on linen. The Duchesses of Marlborough have tablecloths like that which they embroidered for her breakfast linen."

They are skilful in illustrating, in painting pottery, in modelling clay, painting straw basket work. They make the finest trousers and waists and blouses. Their preserves are delicious. They carve melon rinds into works of art and convert them into the daintiest sweets and make dishes never heard of in this part of the country.

"One of the features of the woman's department of the Southern Exposition," said Mrs. Pryor, "will be a southern kitchen in operation, where everything prepared will be distinctly and exclusively southern."

Representatives of different States in the South attended the meeting at Mrs. Pryor's residence, No. 2 West Sixty-ninth street, last Wednesday, when the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Roger A. Pryor; Vice-Presidents, Mrs. Eugene McLean, Mrs. John W. Philip, Mrs. W. L. Terhoun, Mrs. Samuel B. Paul, and Mrs. Parker; Recording Secretary, Miss Annie Patterson; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Francis Byrd, and Treasurer, Mrs. Nathan Strauss.

Letters were read from women who are still out of town, pledging support of the movement. Weekly meetings will be held at the residence of the president until all preliminary arrangements are completed. Among those who have promised to help Mrs. Pryor are Mrs. John F. Carlisle, Mrs. Algernon Sullivan, Mrs. Robert Lee Lewis, Mrs. Howard Spinks, Miss Louise Sullivan, Mrs. Morgan of Georgia, Mrs. Mary Smith, of Louisiana, and Miss Grace Kirk of New Orleans.

The exhibition will last from four to six weeks, during which time there will be continuous amusement.

State Prison, hereafter all convicts faring alike. Such privileges have been enjoyed for years by those able to pay for them.

The Board of Prison Inspectors, which is endeavoring to find out who is responsible for the recent escape of the two prisoners, has announced the end of the good times.

The first discovery that some convicts were favored came about three months ago, when it was found that Colonel Clark, who is serving a sentence for his part in a robbery at Dover, had, with the aid of some of the deputies, established a trade in canned goods and groceries with the occupants of other cells, who paid for extras with the money at their command and also with ivory teeth, leather, canvas and other novelties that they found time to make when the guards were not looking.

These articles the Colonel, again with the aid of the friendly deputies, managed to smuggle outside the prison gates, where purchases were found. With his profits Colonel Clark furnished his cell so that it was as comfortable as any sleeping room in a well appointed hotel.

These good times might have continued indefinitely had not the suspicions of the head keeper been aroused. He investigated, and four deputies were suspended for three months, and one keeper was made public stories reflecting on the prison management, was dismissed.

One of the luxurious convicts, whose cell had a rug and a hair mattress, was George Valentine, former cashier of the Middlesex County Bank, who is serving a six years' term for wrecking that institution. Valentine, when told that hereafter he would have to put up with the regular prison fare, expressed great indignation and questioned the right of the prison authorities to deny him luxuries, so long as he was willing to pay for them. He was told, however, that he was not in prison for the luxuries.

Among other things the inspectors have ordered the alarm clocks out of the guard houses on the prison walls. They were of the type that the guards would sometimes take a nap when things were quiet, and were set to awaken them at regular intervals, so that they could make their rounds. The two convicts who escaped six weeks ago sealed the prison walls a few feet from one of the guard houses.

NO MORE LUXURIES IN 'RICH MAN'S ROW'

New Jersey Convicts with Money Must Live on Prison Fare.

INTRODUCTIONS AND TIPS HER TRADE.

Mrs. Rogers Brings Buyers and Sellers Together.

THEN GETS COMMISSION.

Has Wall Street Plungers Among Her Clients—She Is in Court for Debt.

How many and varied are the ways of making a living in New York was indicated yesterday when Mrs. Carolyn A. Rogers, of No. 112 West Fortieth street, testified in an examination in supplementary proceedings that her income was derived from "introductions, tips and sales."

She has been questioned concerning her ability to pay a judgment of $175 obtained against her by a firm in Fifth avenue. The interrogatories were put by Julius Lehmann, counsel for her creditor. The examination took place before Justice Hassell in the city court.

"What do you mean," asked Lawyer Lehmann, "by introductions, tips and sales?" "I mean," Mrs. Rogers replied, "that I introduce some one having something to sell to some one wanting to buy, and I get a commission for it."

"Explain the meaning of tips," "I have friends who are plungers, and I know stock brokers down in 'the Street.' I give information to my friends, and if they make money I get a commission."

Mrs. Rogers said she was the widow of Charles W. Rogers, a banker and broker in London, who died ten years ago. She said her maiden name was Carolyn Anna Billings; that she came to this country seven years ago; that she had been living in the Rindland, at Broadway and Fifty-seventh street, for several years. For a time she had worked as a widow trimmer for Mrs. Tierce, in Fifth avenue, but lately had had a position on the New York Teachers' Magazine.

Mrs. Rogers said she had become engaged to be married to a man two years ago, and that for sixteen months afterward he had settled an income of $2,000 a month upon her from investments he had made.

"Who broke off the engagement?" asked counsel.

"I did."

"Did you ask for an accounting when the engagement was broken off?"

"I never had an accounting with the gentleman."

Mrs. Rogers was asked for the name of the man to whom she was engaged. She declined to give it. The lawyer insisted, and Mrs. Rogers appealed to Judge Hassell, who refused to compel her to divulge the name.

Have you borrowed large sums from your friends, and do you now owe large sums of money?"

"I have borrowed until I am sick of it."

Upon examination by her counsel, Henry Statton, Mrs. Rogers said the money she got from the man to whom she was engaged was not borrowed, but given as a token of friendship.

Mrs. Rogers has an office and studio in No. 112 West Fortieth street, up two flights of stairs. Behind the brass grill work on the floor is a glass door, which enables Mrs. Rogers to conduct her business of "tips, introductions and sales" with the caution and privacy of a Russell Sage. She said to a Journal reporter last night:

"I don't see why so much has been made of this. Why should I not enter into this business and make my living by hard, honest work? It is a legitimate occupation. It seems to me that I should get credit for the plucky fight I have made to get out of the club to which I am in financial distress. I have lost money through investments which a certain person made for me. I owe money, but it is a misfortune which came to many."

"I don't think there is anything funny in my business of tips, introductions and sales. I am simply a stock broker's agent. I know many plungers and I go to them with inside information. When I do make money I make a lot of it. That's the beauty of it. I have moved here for the sake of economy and am doing my best to fight it out."

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

STRONG NERVES STRONG BODY

A vigorous constitution and power of endurance depend upon the nerves. The nerves give force to all the organs of the body. The system is kept clean of morbid material. The blood circulates quickly, exhilarates; feeds the muscles and tissues with wholesome nourishment. Strong nerves keep strength of body increasing, and the muscles firm.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND MAKES NERVE STRENGTH.

Robert Fuller, of Alexandria, S. D., writes: "I was very nervous, and weak, with pain in the small of my back and nervous headache. I could sleep but very little. I took different medicines which did me no good."

"Paine's Celery Compound changed my whole system from weakness to health and vigor, after taking only four bottles. I do not believe there is a better medicine in existence."
